A CARRIERS' ADDRESS TO THE PATRONS OF THE LOUISVILLE DEMOCRAT-JAN. 1, 1864.

Asyoners, high on a fall church steeple. Lifts up the cortain that iddes the world, He calls upon earth and all the good people To look on the wonderful scenes unfurled; He kicks up his long, sharp-pointed shoes Ard nods his queer old sugar-loaf tile, At the feasts, the frolics, the battles, the stews, And every particular plece of guile; He waves his spade Like a soldier's hlade, For he is to bury old Slxty-Three; Wlih a Whoop and a Hollo to wake the dead, He bangs the Poet about the head With, "Wake up, old fellow, and say what you see." SCENE I.

Shoot sparkles up that downward come assistants:
Edgar Kecnon, Assistant Anditor; Uberto Keenor, James M. Withrow, R. R. Baeon, John A. Crittenden, Wm. L. Harlan, Chas. T. Miller, John L. Sneed, Clerks.
The Assistant Auditor and Clerks are all competent and will, we feel assured, discharge their duties with fidelity.
In this connection we cannot forbear an expression of our hope that the Legislature will increase the compensation of the Assistant and Clerks in the Auditor's office. They do more work and get poorer pay than any In rich cascades of glittering gems; Where tides of music, wildly torn From brazen lips of bugle and horn, Float through the arched and vaulted rooms Where haughty beauty, in sliks and plumes, And gorgeous colors of purple and red, With shoulder-strap and epaulette Weave about in the mazy set Like a various-colored thread; And others with jest and anecdote That seem like bubbles of wine to float, On laughter as sweet as rhyme,

Walt for the golden-fingered clock With a dainly and musical shock To strike the mldnight chine; And as the sound rings out, a cup
Is filled to the new born year, And shout and laugh goes rising up With clash and clatter and cheer."

ASMODRUS kicks up his wicked old heels And bobs and wargles his steenle-crowned tile: 'Tis very certain the queer rogue feels That this is exactly in his style: And he says, with a leer that is not deception. "The President's New Year's night reception.

He waves his spade Like a soldler's blade With a sulphur-and-brimstone kind of glee: With a Whoop and a liello to wake the dead, He bangs the Poet about the head With, "Wake up, old fellow, and say what you see.

SCENE II. "Down where the winding Tennesse Brawls hubbling over the pebbles, And snow in spits comes from the sky And the black bush hides the rebels, "A soldler marches his lonely beat

And shlvers-bis fingers are all Frozen stiff at the iron touch "He stamps his feet on the snowy ground,

And closer about his shoulder He wraps his ragged old soldier-cloak, As he feels the night grown colder. "And then, as the thought comes rising up To-morrow is 'New Year's Morning, The dear old past, and lis tender tles, Comes into his bosom, burning. "He sees the cable far in the wood: The sweetheart stands in the doorway Who kissed him with tears when he hurrled off On this dreary Southern foray.

Till a moonbeam falls broad, full and tright On the sighls of a rebel rifle. "A sudden crack-a single throb, And the heart that dreamed of home

"His heart fills up in the lonely night

With thoughts that he cannot stiffe

And the days that will never come." And his gibbering face turns pale, As he totters aloft with a grotesque limp And wipes his eyes with his tall; "The soldler's death and the President's revel."

Gives up its hopes with a sudden sob

He says, "would shock any decent devil" But he waves his spade Like a soldier's biade
With a sulphur-and-hrlmstone kind of glee With a Whoop and Hollo to wake the dead, He bangs the Poet about the head With, "Wake up, old fellow, and say what you see."

There where the fatal pestllence broods Over the Mississlppi's floods, The rotting thousands, like rotten sheep The slave and the 'curled llyperion,' Are dying, as died in one night's sleep The army of the Assyrlan. In the crowded dens of Washington; Sorrow and suffering, care and death
Are oil on the flames of pleasure,

As, wilk an uninterrupted breath, They lavish the Nation's treasure. And he whose plunder is most can brave While the glitter about the presence Of this new Sodom is that which lighte In summer's long pestilential alg'its The rottenne s of pulrescence.

Humph," said the Imp, in deep disgust, As he looked at the avarlce, plunder and lust, And mashed his bat down perfectly flat; Then swore an oath in his flaming wrath. Whih a towering sulphurous storm, Before they traveled the brimsione path These scoundrels would have to reform.

And he waved his spade Llke a soldier's blade With a sulphur-and-brimstone kind of glee-Then struck it deep in the mould and shard As he turned from the shaken and shivering bard To hury poor Slaty-Three.

Au Expensive Failure.

Among the enrious features of the recent pan, is the fact of the failure of the Armstrorg guns, as recorded by an officer writing from the fact to a friend in England. An ingenious explanation is given for this failure, whereby the excessive cleaning of the shot by the saliors is made responsible for the disse-ter to the guns. Were it not for the concur-rent testimony of the English press before this event relative to these guns, we should be inclined to attach some importance to the explanation. But the failure at Kagosima had been anticipated by the best writers in Euglandon this subject, and public sentiment has been slowly settling down into the belief that the Armstrong gun is not by any means what it was supposed. To the many persons in America who used to attach a terrible degree of torce to this arm, and who were always hearing of Armstrong guns on board of rebel rams and privateers, this influre will doubtiess afford much relief. It certainly should do so, for the prevailing opinion in England is very far from favoring this gun as a match for our American artillery. Sir William Armstrong has juined his invention so much in conseuence of the results of experiments at Shoeburyness, that it is difficult to say what form is its latest. Nor need we care much as to its details, in view of the established result of all these experiments, that the most effective gun is the old sixty-eight pounder. Yet on the Armstrong gun the British government has expended more millions of dollars than we have in this war to rear up our iron-clud navy. Without any disposition to boast of our achievements, we may point to this comparisou with some degree of national pride.

As we stated when he was first nominated as a candidate when he was first nominated as a candidate, no better selection could have been made, and the high character which he has always sustained, not only in private life, but in the many public stations which he has won upon his own merits, justify us in the opinion that, at the close of his term, he will merit and receive an increase of public confidence.

He has appointed the following corps of assistants:

do more work and get poorer pay than any public servants in the State Government, and the increased cost of living presents strong reasons for an increase of pay. The pay of an officer ought to be regulated by these considerations. They ought to be paid for their labor.

other ought to be regulated by these considerations. They ought to be paid for their labor.

In parting with the late Anditor, Grant Green, Esq., we can, with truth, say that the State has had no better efficer. He has, in all respects, been faithful in his office, watchful of the pablic interest, and successful in the discharge of all his duties. No man lays down the cares and responsibilities of public office with a better reputation than Mr. G., and none have proven themselves more acceptable to all who have had official intercourse of the public interest, and successful in the discharge of all his duties. We can and transactions with him, than he. We can with great truth, say of him, "well done, thou good and taithful servant." His Assistant, Cornelius Bulley, Esq., has shown himself to be a faithful and competent officer. He, as well as the late clerks, have labored faithfully and industriously in their respective stations.

Queen Victoria at Law. A singular case has just been brought before the Tribanal of the Seine. It appears that a lady, a native of London, who was married first to a rich Eoglish gentleman, was united a second time to a Franch nobleman, Count de Silly. She died in October last, and

The several legatees and the executors wrote to the English Embassador to acquaint him with the fact, information of which was in due time transmitted to her Majesty, who decided to accept the legacy. One of the legatees then insinuated that her Majesty should let the relatives have the money. The English legal authorities were consulted, and they gave the opinion that the relatives had no right to the money, of which the Oneen was the sovereign disof which the Queen was the sovereign dispenser, unless they came under the category of the poor. The general legatees then required the royal signature legality allixed to a formal document, and they proceeded to summen the Queen to appear on the 2d of July, citier in person or by progration. The citier in person or by procuration. The summons was sent on the 22d of June. The case then cause before the Tribunal of the Scice, the plaintiff applying that an order should be made for the payment of the legacy to her Majesty's embassador. The legal representative of her Majesty preceded that the money should be made for the sense pour immediate necessity of raising troops for State deelense.

A pricedent was cited, in which a legacy to the Pope of an estate had been given ever to the nuncio the soldiers killed. estate had been given ever to the nuncio after some dispute. The question, the advo-cate for the Queen contended, was not one of private law, but of international law The advocate on the other side maintained that the eguey was made to the Queen as a private in would not be earried out unless her Majest became personally the aimoner of the sum left at her disposul. The embassador represented his Government, that is, the chambers of his country, the ministry, and the royal person; but he could not represent one of those par-tles separately from the rest. The French law knew peither sovereigns ner embassadors. The Queen ought to submit to the require-ments of that law, and to put her signature a the foot of a special and authentic prognation. That was the only guarantee which the legatees could have that the sum left had passed into the sugast hands for which the testatrix had destined it. The President of the Trib nad destined it. The President of the Ma-nual, M. Beniost-Champy, decided in favor of her Majesty, declaring that an embassador represented his sovereign in a supreme de-gree, and that all he said and did was sub-stantially said and done by his sovereign.

THE DEFENSES OF THE LAKES .- The ques t'on of the abrogation of the treaty with country are mutually restricted to an insig-nificant navai force upon the northern lakes, is now being discussed with an evident tendency on the pirt of the people of this country towards its abrogation. A treaty like that cau only benefit a country like Canada, not a growing country like the United States. While one stagnates on the northern boundaries of the lakes without any improvement over the princes of forests. any improvement over the princeval forests which covered the country, the other applies its industry, clears its lorests, improves its soii, and rapidly develops its natural re sourcee; cirles have strung up, railroads have been built, mining associations are in cetive operation, wealth has largely increased at d interests promoted vastly expeeding those which existed when the treaty was framed. These interests are now without adequate protection, and the mis-chief which might be done, without being able to retaliate upon a hostile unighbor, is nfile ent reason against the continuence of the treaty, and for our affording better protection to the properly upon the lake borders. Our weakness in this quarter is a disadvantage to us in any malonal trouble which arises; not only in making our neighbors more exacting, but in placing in their hands, if hostilizit incident the means to give us a if hostilely incited, the means to give us a great deal of appropriate in our sectional disputes. Canada may not like to be put to the expense of keeping a larger naval force upor the lakes, but, as she has not the same interests involved, she will not absolutely require it. But, whether she will or not, it is not destrable that we shall volnatarily put fetters upon our own limbs, to reduce our strength to an equality with a less energetic and less wealthy neighbor, who iets no opportunity general llaumond, escape to show his enimoeity against us. lief in behalf of the poor. So far as the meeting acted it will result in good, but it strikes us that by making a more thorough and efficient organization much greater good might be accomplished. By the action of last night's meeting two men were appointed to solicit contributions in each ward and two to distribute to those needing charity in each ward. If ten had been appointed to solicit contributions, and twenty or more to look up and distribute to those in need of help in each of the wards, they could scarcely accomplish the work which needs to be done. But the poor may he thankful for any favors, and we trust that from the very small and imperfect organization of last night a substantial and effective working committee may be formed. It is certainly not in the power of the nnmber of persons named to accomplish the work needed to be done. If the citizens of Louisville really intend to take care of the poor during this intensely cold weather, let them make such committees at once as can in the shortest possible space of time get the most money and provisions together, and procure the services of twenty or thirty or more in each ward to look up the needy and administer to their wants at once. CRIME.-In all large cities there are hundreds of men and women who are so thoroughly debased in every moral sense that they will resort to the committal of the mos dreadful crimes. Indolence leads to vice. and vice to crimes, the contemplation of which arouse pity and sympathy. Parents in many cases are so hardened that they teach of good things to come. The dining half was their children to lie and steal, in order that they may have money to purchase liquor, and in some cases they teach them to do things which are more fearful. There is no better place for the study of crime toan the police court. Almost daily you may see arrayed there persons of ail ages, color, sex and conditions, for trial for offences of all nature. We have seen there the old gray-headed man and woman arraigned side by side with those who have scarcely entered their teens. The picture is a sad one, but nevertheless real. SUDDEN DEATH .- A few days since a young nan ahout eighteen years old, whose name is nuknown, died very suddenly at the corner of Main and Clay streets. a very large house, with use for only a portion of it, the old man came to spend his last days with him. For the first few days after his arrival here everything went along very peaceably, and the parties lived happily together, butafter a short time the son got tired of his father and endeavored to make everything as uncomfortable as possible for the old man. Time wore along when the son commenced ahusing his aged parent, but the old man bore all with patience, knowing that his days were nearly numhered. Jacoh often, while under the influence of that destroyer of all mankind, strong drink, beat his father; and on one occusion very seriously injured him. Not long since the old geutleman became sick, being inflicted with a disease of the bladder. Jacob made this an excuse to have the old man removed from the house; and he placed him in an open out house, with no covering, and nothing to lay on hut a pile of straw. In this condition the old man was kept without food or fire, until Thursday evening, when company dispersed, and thus closed one of

The table was most lavishly furuished, and the recipients of this bounty said with warmth that they 'had never enjoyed a better dinner.' Several more dinners could have been supplied from the tables after all had caten. Patriotic songs followed the banquest; then soldiers' cheers for the ladies who had made this a merry Christmas, for the surgeons who had kindly bound up their wounds and soothed their sorrows, for the steward and his helping wife, for all who remembered them with sympathy in their sad absence from home; and cheers for the Union, dear to every patriot and Christian heart, closed this happy festival.

Hospital 18.—A great abundance of everything desirable was supplied. One hundred and fifty were fed, and provisions for three days more remained. Surgeon Bell took a company of young ladies through the wards, and it seemed to cheer up the sick like seeing their sisters. Chaplain W, Holman officiated, and the exercises were of great interest. The day passed off most happily, for which the soldiers are indebted to Mrs. Dr. Bell, Mrs. J. F. Speed, Mrs. Dinwiddie, and others.

Hospital 19.—"Through the efforts of Mrs. C. Hanna and Mrs. Bertholph, a most excellent diuner was served. Mesdames Marshall, Rogers, Garduer, Geary, Fosdick and Anderson contributed was served. Mesdanes satisfied, hopers and provisions. Surgeon Richards presided at the tables, rendering the committee every facility in his power and made them feel perfectly at home. The day passed off pleasantly, and the ladies returned home at night delighted with the day and and met the ladies of Jesfersonville, who had also made ample provision to give the scarred-heroes of Camp Joe Holt a royal dinner. As there were no conveniencea for giving the dinner at the camp, it was given in Spark's Hall. Two hundred and fifty soldiers were waited on by willing hands, and made to feel that they were cared for. Judging from the admirable manner in which the dinner was served, and the many hearts made glad it must be that the cause of the Union is as much indebted to some loyal ladies as to some Major-Generals. Edwir Adams has now established himself as one of the acknowledged great favorites of Louisville. Apart from his great drama of "Dead Hart," his Imper sonations have been confined almost exclusively to the legitimate drama. He will commence the second week of his return engagement in the performance of his great part of Abel Magwilch, in Dicken's celebrated novel of "Great Expects tions," a character which he acted thirty consecutive nights in Philadelphia. The frequent outrages perpetrated in various parts of the State by lawless bands of ma rauders can, in a large degree, be traced to the active aid of rebel sympathizers in our midst, or their neglect to furnish to military commandants the information in their po ession, which would lead to the defeat and capture of such maranders.

Sympathizers with the rebellion who, while rejoying protection from the Government, buse the lenlercy extended to them by conealing the movements of rebel gnerrillas, by

Late Intelligence from Prices' Army

Proceedings in the Chesapeake case No More Currency to be Issued.

Winchester, Virginta.

Mississippi department.

Price commands the army in the field, its numbers being estimated at 17,000 strong, but Brittain says the entire effective rebel force, outside of Texas, does not exceed thir een o'cleck. Of Price's Missourians only about three or four thousand remain, and but few of these are part of the army be took out of Missouri. The velerans of Lexington and Pea Radge are nearly all in their graves. The Missouri troops are Shelby's cavalry and Parsons' infantry brigade, Mosby's guerrillas and conscribts and bushwheekers who have recently scripts and bush whackers who have recently Geu. Steele has been superseded in com mand of the rebel department of the Indian Territory by Brigadier General Mcxer. General Gaso is another Texan who has a command in Holmes' department. The rebel troops have Issues of only fresh peef and corn meal, with one ration of flour per week. They are badly clothed, have no

Reports of lederal successes in Texes, and Bank's possession of the Rio Grands, sectlered great gloom among the rebels. The rumors of the issue of President Lincoln's sumesty proclamation is also having effect throughout their ranks, and desertions frequent. Many well informed officers were equent. quent. Many well informed officers were of the opinion that Price would move with one column upon Little Rock, and Maxey, with another one upon Fort Smith, weather here coldest ever known. The themometer has stood 10 to 15 degrees below zero for several days. Show six inches deep. Cavairy cressed the river on ice and intercepted a rebel mail. Letters speak of an immediate advance of their force northward as probable. HALIFAX, January 9.

The Admiralty Court convened to-day, Hor. Judge Stewart presiding, Hor. W. Johnson, Advocate General for the Crown: W. D Morse, council for the owners of the Chesapeake; and J. W. Richle, council for the Confederates.
In opening the Chesapeake case the Judge stated that the cause was entertained upon the ground that the seizure of the vessel was a piratical act. His opinion was that the vessel ought to be given up to her owners. Mr. Ritchic asks the judge to contemplate the probability of an application of the Con-ederates. For her his honor declared he ould not entertain anything of the kind Mr. Ritchie then gave his interpretation of the law upon the validity of seizures, conending that any citizens of the Southern Confederacy, with or without a commission, have an absolute right to selve all ressels belonging to the Federals, and it will be a law-

The Advocate General said that he experienced some difficulty in bringing the ense into this court, as there was a pretence of her be ing a lawful prize, but there was prima facevidence that the capture was piritical. Il picion was that the vessel should be deliv Acjourned to the 13th lest.

WASHINGTON, January 9. A letter from Loudon county, Va., says that daring robberies are being everywhere com-mitted, and money extorted from the inbabit-ants to save their dwellings from conflagration. There is a greater state of alarm pre-valling than has before existed during the eing no protection afforded them, the citiens are compelled to submit. It is stated that more than a week ago the rebeis were moving towards Winches'er, with the intention, probably, of proceeding beyond bat town. This report is now verified. The government has not been unmindful of this im-portant fact, and has taken measures accord-ingly.

[Special to the Post.] WASHINGTON, January 8. Mr. Chese is firmly resolved not to issue any more legal torder currency in any centiu gency. This purpose he openly avows. The inc-year certificates are depressed, owing to the popular impression that an unusual amount is in the market. The fact is, the rademptions exceed the issues, and the amount affect is rapidly growing less. It is considered that no 5-20 bonds will be issued after the present

The War Department will not furnish trans portation, as was supposed, to persons desiring to attend the sales of confiscated lands. Washington, Jan. 9. The Secretary and Assistant Secretary of the Interior, and the heads of the several Bu-reens, together with all the employees of that department met in the rotunds of the building this evening, and adopted snitable resolu tions in view of the recent decease of Judge Caleb B. Smith, formerly Scoretary of the lu-lerior, as a further mark of respect Secretary Usher ordered the department to be closed during the remainder of the day. BALTIMORE, January 9.

Reliable information from Cumberland this morning says there are no rebels in the v.cinity of Cumberland, Margland. They returned from the vicinity of Petersburg, and have gone in the direction of Stiunton. All quiet stong the whole line of the Bulti-more and Onio railroad. Trains are running regularly. No grain is coming forward, and river navigation is closed.

RAILROAD AND STEAMBOAT ACCIDENTS LAST YEAR .- The total number of serious accidents in the United States on railroads, last year, was 934; of which 264 resuited in death, and 671 in wounds. This does not include accidents where no lives were lost, accidents to adividuals which were caused by their own carelessness or design, or deaths or injuries crossing or standing upon railroad tracks where trains were in motion. The tetai number of casualties by steamboat accidents during the year was 349, of which 255 were killed and 85 wounded. Cit'zens of the United States visiting foreign countries are liable to serious inconvenience, if unprovided with authentic proof of their national character, and although the recent regulations requiring masters and owners of vesseis leaving this port to obtain papers from the United States Marshal do not make it incumbent on each passenger to provide himself with such a permit, yet the best safeguard of a traveler abroad is a passport from the Department of State, certifying the bearer to be a citizen of the United States, and entitled to all lawfuil aid and protection. A SAD PICTURE -People who buy a great deal more than they sell or produce for others, will run into embarrassmeat, sooner criater. So of a nation. We see by recent reports that our imports for seven weeks preceding the 19th of December were $14,-000,000 in excess of exports; and to make the matter worse, our exports did not consist of cotton, tobacco or breadstnffs, but of gold -$10,000,000 of which was sent away in the time named-seven weeks. The Navy Commission, appointed for the purpose, have, after a laborious and thorough investigation of the subject, come to the conclusion that petroleum or hydrocarbon oils, for the purpose of generating on a charge of inrnishing plates to the rebels steam, is superior to coal in many respects. for the issuance of money.

bie change in the weather. An Evansville dispatch to Capt. Borche, of yeserday, says the river at that point continues open, hough nearly closed by the ice.

The Atlautic received 20 tuns additional freight at Cairo, and went on her way crowded with peo-The gunboats at Cairo have had to get close to shore to avoid the floating icc. All efforts to pump out the Jewess have proved mavailing. Yesterday the machinery was being emoved from her. She will probably prove a compiete wreck. The ice gorge at the tow-head above the city may prove dangerous to boats along shore, should the ice suddculy break loose. Boatmen are a little nervous on the subject.

The following boats are at New Albany: Clara Bell, Huntsman, Huntress, Star, Izetta, Convoy No. 2 and the tow-boat Lloness. At Portland the ice-bound fleet comprises the St. Patrick, Marla Denning, Nashville, Big Grey Eagle, Talascon, Panilne Carroll, Fort Wayne, St Lonis, Atlantic, Echo and the Hospital boat Mc Dougle. There was danger Friday night that some of the coal barges at the city landing would go over the falls. The lee was very troublesome.

We congratulate our friends of the River Brig ade, who have been so fortunate as to be caught at nome during this reign of ice. We hope they will all have a high old time of it, and enjoy themselves hngely.

We had the picasure of a call vesterday from our nandsome friend E. O'Bannou, Esq., of the Big Grey Eagle, who has taken shelter from the inclement weather at the Louisville Hotel. The following highly compilmentary card, signed by a large number of genilemen and ladles guests of the St. Patrick on her recent trip to thi city, we clip from the New Albany Ledger: STEAMER SAINT PATRICK

January 4th, 1864.

January 4th, 1864.

CAPT. J. B. ABCHER-Dear sir: Will you permit us to add this to the many testimonials which rour unrivalled steamer has received from the raveling public.
In every sense of the word the St. Patrick meets the requirements of the traveler. The table, the state rooms, the social ball, and last, but not least, the bar, can all lay claim to the title of "excelsior," and her officers, from the captain to the barber, are beyond criticism and above all praise. Long may the peciless St. Patrick cleave the Western waters, and often may we be permitted to near the champaigne corks pop around her lux-irions festive board. the coid. Henry Milton was a noble fellow. I well remember, when I first met him, how, in my wicked heart, I wondered that, with his handsome person and fine talents, he could make such a sacrifice as to devote himself make such a sacrifice as to devote himself ing broader views, purer ideas of life and living up all that is lovely or cheerful; but I was a stranger to the arrest in the second control of the such as a stranger to the arrest in the second control of the such as a stranger to the arrest in the second control of the such as a stranger to the arrest in the second control of the such as a stranger to the second control of the such as a stranger to the second control of the such as a stranger to the second control of the such as a stranger to the second control of the such as a stranger to the second control of the such as a stranger to the second control of the such as a stranger to the second control of the such as a stranger to the second control of the such as a stranger to the second control of the such as a stranger to the second control of the such as a stranger to the second control of the such as a stranger to the second control of the such as a stranger to the second control of the second con was a stranger to the sweet influences of

The next morning, when it was found out that he had left so suddenly, they all wondered why he had gone; but my sister soon divined the cause of his sudden departure, and I was subjected to their wittieisms

The same summer in which I thus reway. "Refresh your minds with good literature, and seek out-door recreations," goes on this subduer of lunacy: but when jected one of earth's noblest ones. I became acquainted with a gentleman of fine talents there is dinner to get; the baby following and agreeable manners, who at once placed his hand and heart at my disposal, as he her with his eyes and direful screeches; the pudding yet lying undeveloped in heu's said, and in return I gave him a solemn promise to be his wife. But my friends of course thought they had a voice in the matthe "song of the reaper" coming suggestive-ly in from the south field; now, let me ask, ter, and they prohibited the consummation in all candor, is she to refresh her mind of our intentions. I was told that he was unworthy of my regard, but I would not believe it for a long time; and when I really cal woman is too exhausted to undertake became convinced of his unamiabe character my affections for him died out.

thoughts now dwelt frequently on Henry Milton. I thought of him until every day his memory became dearer to me. But never saw him, and only heard occasionally of his wonderful success in winning the gay and thoughtless from the vanities of this world.

ple talk of the "pressure" on great men, but I should much prefer leading a fleet up to the death-hurling forts of Charleston, writing a proclamation for the nation, or

Years rolled on, and, although I had several good offers of marriage, I could not be so untrue to my own heart as to marry any other than Henry Milton, and him I never expected to see on earth. Thus I was led to a higher and better life. Since the prospect of earthly happiness had faded, I turned my eyes to another and a higher sonree for consolation. My chief delight was in relieving those who were in dis- ment or solicitude toward the pale, drudging woman, who, not many years agone, stepped, beaming and hopeful, into his lifetress, ministering to the wants of the dying and instructing the ignorant and out-

About six years from the time my story opened, I was, one warm sunny day in September, teaching some poor children in an arbor in my father's garden. The exercises were finished, and at a sign from me they all arose and repeated the "Lord's Prayer," then passed out two and two. I felt weary morning, and only instructed these children according to appointment, from a sense of duty. Weary and sad I leaned back, resting my face among the cool vines and fell into a dreamy, thoughtful mood.
All my past life passed before my mental vision like a living panorama.

The last interview I had ever had with Henry Milton was vividly remembered; every look, every tone of his voice, and every word that was spoken was repeated. I felt a strange presentment that I should see him soon. Reader, have you not often been thinking of an absent friend, when they have suddenly made their appearance? Such were my feelings, then, when some one came to tell me that a gentleman had inquired for me and was waiting to see me. I felt just as confident that it was Henry as though his name had been announced; and a strange, girlish timidity came over me in spite of all my attempts to appear calm and dignified. Strange that the woman of twenty-four years could not have the assurance of the girl of eighteen!

When I reached the parlor door, stopping an instant to still my agitation, my pride arose to my aid, and I entered and met-yes, Henry Millon, with the same ease with which I would have met any common acquaintance. He looked just as handsome and noble as when I first met him, but his face wore an expression of subdued feeling that was born of affliction. I gave him such a greeting as I thought proper for the occasion, but he thought it cold, and taking both my hands in his he said:

"And is this my only welcome, after six years of absence?

"I am very glad to see you, and can never forget that I am indebted to you for my first religious impressions," I replied, with more of my old manner. He did not reply, but, taking a turn or two across the room with an abstracted air, he sat down by me and asked: "How have the years gone with you, Helen? This face does not look so happy as it did six years ago; but it looks love-lier for the shade of sadness." Then, as if suddenly deciding something, he continued, without waiting for an an-

Farmers' Wives-Why Insane.

Marie Mignonette, rapidly becoming a brilliant star in the Western literary firmament, paints for the Home Journal the following picture, alas! too truthful, of the condition and life of many farmers' wives in the West:
